Recently a hummingbird flew in the window of a school in Nederland, Texas. The children's delight soon turned to concern when it became obvious that the tiny bird was staying far above the windows and might not be able to find its way outside. Since the bird was still flying in the room the next morning, one of the teachers brought a feeder filled with red sugar water and hung it beneath a window. The usually timid hummingbird did not even wait for the teacher to move out of the way. He flew to the feeder as it was being hung & vainly tried to find a way to get at the food. After a few seconds he flew through the window without any nourishment. Two days later a second hummingbird flew into the room and again the red sugar water lured it out the window in a matter of seconds. A search outside that particular room revealed nothing more enticing than a row of shrubbery. However, the teacher whose room had attracted the birds does have red hair!!
